What do you understand by the term upthrust of a fluid? Q2. In what direction and at what point does the buoyant force on a body due to a liquid act? Q3. Define upthrust and state its S.I. unit. Q4. What is the cause of upthrust? At which point can it be considered to act? Q5. Why is a force needed to keep a block of wood inside water? Q6. A piece of wood if left under water comes to the surface. Explain the reason. Q7. A body dipped into a liquid experiences an upthrust. State two factors on which upthrust on the body depends. Q8. How is the upthrust related to the volume of the body submerged in a liquid? Q9. A bunch of feathers and a stone of the same mass are released simultaneously in air. Which will fall faster and why? How will your observation be different if they are released simultaneously in vacuum? Q10. A body experiences an upthrust <math>F_1</math> in river water and <math>F_2</math> in sea water when dipped up to the same level. Which is more, <math>F_1</math> or <math>F_2</math>? Give reason. Q11. A sphere of iron and another sphere of wood of the same radius are held under water. Compare the upthrust on the two spheres.	https://youtu.be/hl-YqZDU80o
